TRADITIONS

Why Seahawks?

The nickname "Seahawks" was selected in 1947, according to Gene and James Warren, members of the first student council at Wilmington College. A five-person committee determined the nickname and the school colors for athletic teams.

"Seahawks" was chosen because of the popularity of the Iowa Seahawks. Coached by former University of Minnesota Head Coach Bernie Berman, the Iowa Seahawks were a pre-flight service team known for their great athletic ability. The nickname also worked well for Wilmington College because of the school's proximity to the ocean.

The committee also decided on two colors - green and gold - based on a recommendation by university art instructor, Emma Lawson. Inspired by the beautiful beaches of southeastern North Carolina, the committee decided on green to represent the color of the ocean and gold to signify the sandy beaches. A third or secondary color of navy was added in the spring of 1992 by Director of Athletics Paul A. Miller.

Fight Song

"Green and Gold," UNCW's fight song, made its debut in January of 1990. Written by Dr. P. Graham Hatcher, an associate professor in the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department, with music by Jeff Lewis, an accompanist in the Creative Arts Department, the song vocalizes the university's spirit.

In 2001, athletic department officials conducted a competition for a new fight song because of its unfamiliarity to the student body. Five committee members narrowed down a list 17 entries to three finalists. Those three entries were performed before the audience at halftime of the final men's basketball game that season.

The winning entry featured the same melody as the original song. It was once again submitted by Dr. Hatcher, with a new arrangement provided by student Mark Eyre. Since then, the UNCW Pep Band has played the new and improved fight song at sporting events.

Lyrics:

*UNC Wilmington
It's blue, teal, gold for me.*

*Soaring Seahawks, scoring Seahawks,
Champions of land and sea.
GO HAWKS!*

*To the Seahawk team we proudly hail,
Our Seahawk pride will never fail.*

*Hail to thee, oh mighty Seahawk.
On to victory!
GO HAWKS!*

Seahawk Statue

The impressive statue perched near the entrance to the Warwick Center has become part of UNCW's folklore. A gift of the Residence Hall Association in 2000, the two-foot tall bronze bird was sculpted by local artist Joe Orlando and is worth an estimated $70,000. Students are taught during freshmen orientation that if you rub the Seahawk, it will bring you good luck.

Many students pass by the structure on the way to home basketball games, rubbing it for good luck.

Sammy is a popular attraction for young and old alike, often visiting local schools and making appearances at community functions

Seahawk Logo

Like UNCW itself, the Seahawk logo has evolved and changed through the years.

When it was first chosen in the early 1950's, the logo resembled a parrot in flight and wore a sailor's hat. A second pose came about in the late 1960's, featuring a dark, eagle-like bird in an attack position, but still wearing a sailor's hat.

The third Seahawk image was unveiled in 1973-74 when men's basketball coach Mel Gibson took over the program. It, too, resembled an eagle, but displayed a fierce side of the Seahawk as it soared.

The fourth Seahawk logo made its debut in 1986 and was used for six years. The image showed the Seahawk strutting for the first time and brought back the sailor hat. Spearheaded by then-Associate Athletic Director Jim Bass, the proud Seahawk had "UNCW" emblazoned across its chest.

The fifth and current logo was created by nationally-renowned artist Gary Longordo. Abstract in nature, the unique logo encompasses a bird's face along with a wave into the number one.

Sammy The Seahawk

In November of 2004, the student newspaper, The Seahawk, held a contest to determine a name for the Seahawk mascot. Nearly 200 entries were submitted by students and supporters, but "Sammy C. Hawk," submitted by student Kristin A. Jorgensen was crowned winner.

The Grubs

One of the most vocal groups of Seahawk supporters are the Grubs, a collection of former students who gather near the east end of Trask Coliseum to display their affinity for the program.

Originated by a group of 10 friends who were students at UNCW in 1983, the Grubs combined to play almost every intramural sport that was offered. After a game one night, a student said his friend looked, "Grubby," and the nickname stuck.

The Grubs assembled every Friday from 4-7 p.m. at a local hangout, "The Patio," to discuss everything from how the Seahawks were faring to strategy for the next intramural game. No one ever missed a meeting.

After graduation in 1986, the Grubs went their separate ways. But, starting in 1987, the Grubs decided to reunite at every CAA Tournament. The Grubs go all out to show their school spirit and create new T-shirts each year for the tournament trip.

The Raiford G. Trask Coliseum ranks as one of the most beautiful on-campus basketball arenas in the nation.

The popular facility seats 6,100 fans for basketball events, with the capacity evenly divided between permanent theater-type seating above the playing floor and bleacher seating on the ground level.

The arena was officially dedicated on Nov. 26, 1977, when the Seahawks entertained nationally-ranked Wake Forest before a sellout crowd. It was also the site of UNCW's first CAA victory on Jan. 5, 1985, when the Seahawks trimmed George Mason, 66-64.

Overall, the Seahawks have enjoyed a favorable home court advantage at Trask. The men's team has won 72.5 percent of its games in the arena, compiling a 269-102 record in 30 seasons, including 27 winning seasons and 41 sellouts.

Moreover, the Seahawks own a 98-22 record at home over the last 10 seasons.

The 1997-98 team posted the only undefeated home season in the program's history when it sailed through with an unblemished 9-0 record.

The main building of the complex contains four general classrooms, a physical measurements laboratory, a computer lab, five racquetball courts and faculty and administrative offices.

The complex also includes the Seahawk Natatorium, a spacious eight-lane, 25X20-yard pool, and the William P. Nixon, Jr., Athletic Annex.

The annex, a 4,000-square foot building located adjacent to the coliseum on the south side, houses the main offices for the athletic department, along with the Seahawk Club's Golden Hawk Room.

Eight CAA titles have been decided at the facility. The 1986 women's basketball championship was staged at UNCW, along with the 1986, 1989, 1990, 1991, 1993 and 1995 Swimming and Diving Championships and the 1996 Volleyball Championship.

Numerous concert and stage performers also have appeared in the facility, including Bill Cosby, Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra, The Oak Ridge Boys, Alabama, Kenny Rogers, Charlie Daniels, Paul Anka, Dionne Warwick, Barbara Mandrell, The Righteous Brothers, The Beach Boys, The Four Tops, Willie Nelson, Gladys Knight, Rich Little, Destiny's Child and Jessica Simpson.

Ten years ago, the arena was the site of a Fed Cup tennis semifinal match between the United States and France. Several of the world's top-ranked women's professional players convened on Wilmington for the event that was televised on ESPN2.

SPORTS MEDICINE

UNCW's student-athletes are in good hands with the Seahawk Sports Medicine team of Scott Hill, Stacy Downar, Vanessa Trono, Margery Ellis, Julie Francis and Aldo Plata.

The Almkuist-Nixon Sports Medicine Complex and George Diab Sports Medicine Center provide outstanding care for UNCW's 350 student-athletes. The two facilities are designed to keep the Seahawks in top physical condition.

Included in the impressive Almkuist-Nixon complex is an athletic training room, examination room, technology-equipped classroom, coaching offices, and locker rooms for men's soccer, women's soccer and softball.

The 2,600-square foot training room is equipped with the latest electrical modalities and equipment. The hydrotherapy room has two plunge pools (hot and cold) as well a therapy pool with a treadmill built into the bottom (Hydroworx 500 series pool).

Also available is a full line of Life Fitness cardio equipment, including a stair master, lifecycle, treadmill, and elliptical machine, a Life Fitness Dual Adjustable Pulley machine and Magnum Fitness Combo Leg Extension/Curl and Multi-Hip machines.

UNCW's student-athletes also benefit from the 1,732-square foot George Diab Sports Medicine Center, a training facility that was opened in 1993 and named for longtime benefactors George and Kitty Diab.

UNCW's student-athletes receive care from a staff of six certified licensed athletic trainers and approximately 19 athletic training students.

RADIO/TV COVERAGE

The increasing popularity of UNCW's men's basketball program can be seen in the expansion of its television, radio and internet properties via the Seahawk Sports Network.

Several Seahawk basketball games will be aired on ESPN's family of networks, the Mid-Atlantic Sports Network (MASN) and Comcast SportsNet throughout the 2008-09 campaign.

Fans also may tune in to "The Benny Moss Show," a 30-minute weekly production of WWAY-TV 3 that includes weekly highlights, player interviews, insights and other special features. The show is hosted by Mike Vaccaro and airs on Sunday afternoons throughout the season.

For the 27th consecutive year, every home and away basketball game can be heard on the Seahawk Sports Network. WAAV-AM 980, Wilmington, N.C., will serve as the flagship station.

Radio coverage of Seahawk hoops begins 30 minutes prior to tip-off, with the pre-game show featuring Head Coach Benny Moss. A 30-minute post-game show wraps up the game and provides an inside look at the matchup and future opponents.

Handling play-by-play duties will be Vaccaro, who begins his fifth season with the program after working as Campbell University's Director of Broadcasting for six years. He will be joined on press row by Joseph Cardile, a Long Island native who begins his 20th year in the broadcasting business.

Veteran broadcasters Mike Vaccaro, right, and Joseph Cardile will call all the action for the Seahawks in 2008-09 on the Seahawk Sports Network.

Television Partners Help Seahawks Increase National Exposure

UNCW's regional and national television coverage will be complemented once again by the Seahawk TV Network, which begins its seventh year of operation in 2008-09.

The Seahawks signed a multi-year agreement with the Mid-Atlantic Sports Network (MASN) last year to televise numerous games this season. The pact will ensure UNCW's basketball team gains maximum exposure in the region and nation, placing the Seahawks in a front of a live television audience at least 13 times overall this season.

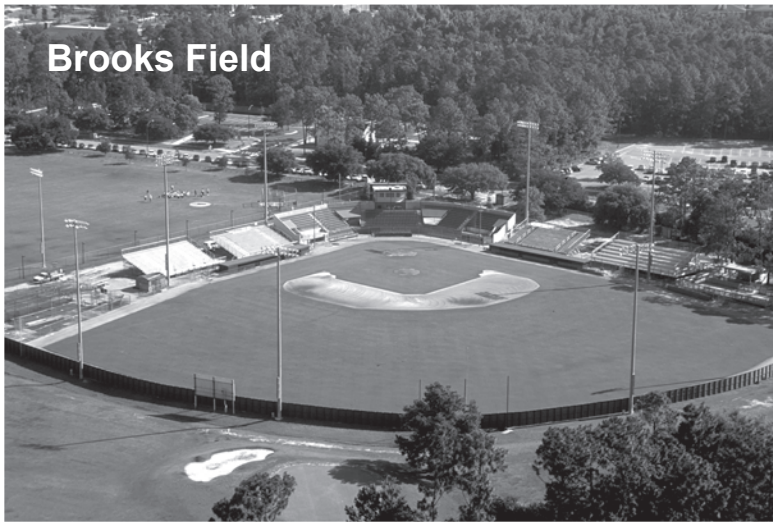

Veteran broadcasters Patrick Johnson, Sam Gore and Brian Rowsom will work the telecasts for UNCW's MASN package in 2008-09.

COLONIAL ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

With more than two decades of success athletically and academically, the Colonial Athletic Association has established a reputation as one of the nation's top collegiate conferences.

The CAA encompasses five of the nation's nine largest metropolitan areas with a geographic footprint that stretches from Boston to Atlanta. The conference has produced 16 national team champions in five different sports, 33 individual national champions, 12 national players of the year, 11 national coaches of the year and 12 Honda Award winners.

Tom Yeager
CAA Commissioner

Even more impressive, however, are the honors accumulated away from competition, which include five Rhodes Scholars and 20 NCAA post-graduate scholars. In 2007-08, the CAA had five ESPN the Magazine Academic All-Americans and more than 1,700 of our 4,000 student-athletes received the Commissioner's Academic Award after posting at least a 3.2 grade point average while lettering in a varsity sport.

The landscape of the conference stretches along the majority of the East Coast, and includes six of the nation's top 25 media markets – New York (1), Philadelphia (4), Boston (7), Washington, D.C. (8), Atlanta (9) and Baltimore (24). The number of television homes in the CAA market exceeds 19.7 million.

The CAA currently sponsors 22 sports, with the addition of a 12-team football league in 2007. Male athletes compete for championships in baseball, basketball, cross country, football, golf, lacrosse, soccer, swimming & diving, tennis, track & field and wrestling. Female athletes battle for conference titles in basketball, cross country, field hockey, golf, lacrosse, soccer, softball, swimming & diving, tennis, track & field and volleyball.

The CAA has made its presence known nationally in men's basketball, with at least three teams advancing to post-season play for the past five years.

CAA member institutions are committed to excellence in the classroom. The Colonial Academic Alliance was created in 2002 by the league's presidents with a goal of expanding their partnership to all aspects of university life outside of intercollegiate athletics. Among the programs established are an undergraduate research conference, coordination of study abroad programs, granting visiting academic status to student-athletes traveling to away contests, academic resource centers and computer labs.

In 2002, two faculty members from CAA institutions were awarded academia's most coveted distinction – the Nobel Prize. John B. Fenn, a research professor in the Department of Chemistry at Virginia Commonwealth University, received the Nobel Prize for chemistry, and Vernon Smith, a professor of economics and law at George Mason University, shared the Nobel Prize in economic sciences.

Commissioner Thomas E. Yeager has guided the CAA since its inception. The conference traces its roots back to 1983 when three of its current members - George Mason University, James Madison University, and the College of William and Mary - were aligned with East Carolina University, the United States Naval Academy and the University of Richmond as a basketball league (ECAC South).

The transformation from ECAC South to CAA took place on June 6, 1985. Charter members George Mason, James Madison, UNC Wilmington and William and Mary were joined by Old Dominion University in 1991 and by Virginia Commonwealth University in 1995. The conference added the University of Delaware, Drexel University, Hofstra University and Towson University in 2001. Georgia State University and Northeastern University became members of the conference on July 1, 2005.

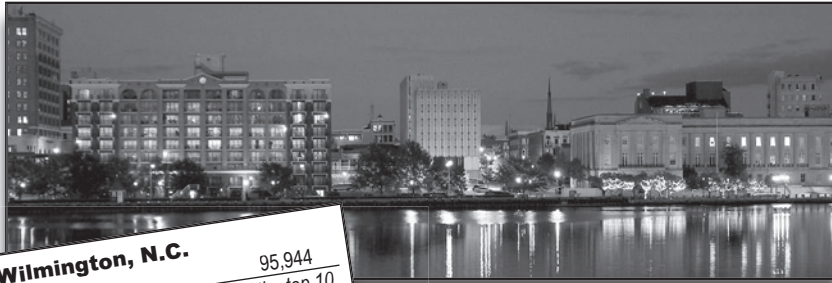

From all-star athletes to Nobel Prize winning faculty, the CAA takes great pride in producing performers who stand out, both on the playing field and in the classroom.

Founded more than 250 years ago on the Cape Fear River, Wilmington has developed into one of the fastest growing deep-water ports on the East Coast, combining economic potential with an abundance of outdoor recreational opportunities.

Wilmington has a historic legacy that begins before the Revolutionary War and runs through its stance as the last Atlantic port open to blockade runners during the Civil War. Today, the continuous restoration and preservation in the Historic District is a tribute to the city's proud heritage.

Historic Wilmington affords visitors the unique opportunity to enjoy a bustling seaport rich in shopping, dining, culture and the arts, while being only minutes away from barrier islands, broad beaches and the intracoastal waterway.

The 200-block Historic District highlighting the downtown area opens into a scenic riverfront park that overlooks the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial.

A beautifully restored battleship, the USS North Carolina was considered the greatest sea weapon in the world when commissioned in 1941. During World War II, "The Showboat" earned 15 battlestars and participated in every major naval offensive in the Pacific from Guadalcanal to Okinawa. A memorial since 1961, the battleship is dedicated to the men and women of all U.S. military services who defended our country during WWII.

One of Wilmington's most unique features is the city's status as the leading entertainment production center in the Southeast. The city's evolution into "Hollywood East" began when Dino DeLaurentis shot Stephen King's "Firestarter" in 1984. One year later, Dino DeLaurentis constructed a studio facility in the Port City and the complex, now owned by EUE/Screen Gems, is the largest production studio east of Hollywood, offering nine sound stages on a 32-acre site near the Wilmington International Airport.

Numerous movies, television series and commercials have been filmed in Wilmington. The popular show, "Dawson's Creek," was produced in Wilmington and shot frequently on the UNCW campus as well as Warner Bros. hit "One Tree Hill."

A film-friendly community, Wilmington residents have embraced the industry, often appearing as "extras" in movies. It's not uncommon for celebrities the likes of Sandra Bullock, Nick Nolte, Julia Roberts, Tom Cruise and Dennis Hopper to be seen dining at a restaurant, shopping at the mall or just simply walking along the shore.

Wrightsville Beach, just minutes away from Wilmington's downtown area, is a year-round island resort. Wide, uncrowded beaches, full service marinas and a variety of accommodations are complemented by excellent seafood restaurants, specialty shops and exciting nightlife.
